ABOUT our cover:

The surname BAIRD is originally from the south of France, but the first mention of the name in Britain came with William the Conqueror. There is reason to believe that some of our name came to Scotland in 1174 when King William the Lion returned from his captivity in England. Early spellings are: BARD, BARDE, BYRD, BEARD, etc.

An old tradition in the family records is that William the Lion, while hunting in one of the southwest counties happened to wander from his attendants and was alarmed by the appearance of a wild Boar, and calling for assistance a gentleman by the name of BAIRD, who had followed the King, came up and had the good fortune to slay the object of the King's alarm. For this signal service, William conferred upon his deliverer large grant of land and assigned him, for his Coat-of-Arms, "A Boar Passant" and for his motto "Dominous Fecit"- which arms are to be seen upon the ancient monuments of the BAIRDs of Auchmedeen in the church yard of Banff.

Some mottoes on our Coat-of-Arms are: "Vi et Virtute" meaning, live with virtue/honor. "And, Dominus Fecit" meaning, God hath made, Wear it well. . . .

The genealogy of the BAIRDs begins with the religious persecutions of King James and the Test Act of 1681 against Presbyterians by Charles II of England. BAIRDs are an integral part of the history of Scotland, North Ireland, France, the Presbyterian Church, and our own American Revolution. Many of our name gave up their lives, their fortunes, their homes, to follow valiant if not always winning causes. Some were political followers of "Bonnie Prince Charlie," and others, for the sake of their religion, were forced to leave their native Scotland.

Dictionary of American Biography: Volume 1 , edited by Allen Johnson; Published by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York 1927.

BAYARD, WILLIAM (1761 - Sept. 18, 1826), merchant, son of Col. William and Catherine (McEVERS) BAYARD, and descendant of Balthazar BAYARD, the Huguenot ancestor of the American family, was born in the village of Greenwich outside New York City. His father, a colonial merchant, extensive landowner, and outspoken Tory, raised a Loyalist regiment and lost his property by confiscation. He sailed for England in 1783, taking all his family except young William, who had just married Elizabeth, the daughter of Samuel CORNELL. On Dec. 1, 1786, young BAYARD formed a partnership with Herman LeROY, investing £2,000. A venture to Teneriffe for liquor was the first step in the development of this firm, which became the leading commercial house of New York during the next forty years. James McEVERS, BAYARD'S cousin, was later taken into partnership, but he and the reserved LeROY were overshadowed by the personality of BAYARD. The commerce of New York was at its lowest ebb when the firm started, but the long wars between England and France brought increased opportunities. Several of their ships were condemned by the belligerents, but the remainder brought in good profits. During the War of 1812, they owned a number of successful privateers. The close of the war found LeROY, BAYARD & McEVERS in a commanding position in New York, trading extensively with Europe and the East and West Indies. They had the confidence of the wary Dutch bankers and their London drafts could be used in the place of coin in the East Indian trade. By 1822, they had several ships trading along the South American coast, taking advantage of the revolutions. During the interruption of trade caused by the Embargo the partners had turned to land speculation and the town of LeROY is still a reminder of their activity in developing Genesee County. BAYARD had many other interests. In 1817, he was sounding out the Amsterdam bankers for a loan to finance the Erie Canal. He served as president of the Bank of America, the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York, the Morris Canal Company, and various other organizations. When merchants assembled at Philadelphia from all the northern states in 1824 to protest against the tariff increase, BAYARD was made chairman of the gathering. By that time, his former partners had died and their places were filled by his sons, William, Jr., and Robert. They, rather than their father, were responsible in part for the apparently shameless profiteering of the BAYARDS and HOWLANDS in building two frigates for the Greeks in 1825. The notoriety caused by this affair undoubtedly hastened the death of the elder BAYARD at Greenwich on Sept. 18, 1826, after a long illness. His portrait, by William DUNLAP, reveals the face of a statesman rather than a merchant (Catalogue of Portraits in the Chamber of Commerce, p. 13). He had a reputation for mildness of temper and charm of manner in addition to the unusual business acumen which made him one of the wealthiest men in the country.

Pages 513 & 514: BAIRD, Spencer Fullerton (Feb. 3, 1823 - Aug. 19, 1887), zoologist, son of Samuel BAIRD and Lydia McFUNN BIDDLE, was born in Reading, Pa., the third of seven children, all of whom reached maturity with a degree of personal distinction. Back of them on both sides lay an ancestry of God-fearing, intelligent, energetic forebears, almost entirely of English and Scotch blood. Spencer's father was a man of culture and ability, a lawyer by profession. After his death in 1833, Mrs. Samuel BAIRD made her home in Carlisle, Cumberland County, Pa., where at the age of thirteen young Spencer entered the local Dickinson College, in which his brother William, his closest associate for many years, was already a senior. In the physical surroundings of Carlisle the two boys, both possessed by a passion for natural history, found abundant satisfaction. Fields, woods, streams, and ponds offered a peculiarly rich nature fauna, while the regional limestone carried many interesting fossils. From extended rambles over the countryside the lads would return laden with specimens of birds and beasts to be preserved and studied. Together they undertook to secure a complete series of the birds of Cumberland County. A new species of fly-catcher thus obtained in 1840 led to a warm friendship between young Spencer and Audubon, the ornithologist, the first of a succession of scientists whom the youth modestly laid under tribute to his insatiable thirst for knowledge of natural history. Vacations he devoted largely to collecting excursions, to visiting all zoological workers and museums, or to copying zoological descriptions and plates from books he could not own. The growing list of scientific acquaintances recorded even in his early diaries reads a little like a catalogue of recognized authorities of the day.

In 1840 Spencer took his A. B. degree at Dickinson College; and in 1843 the institution conferred upon hm the degree of Master of Arts. During this period he began and abandoned the study of medicine, finding it unsuited to his tastes; but meanwhile he greatly enlarged his scientific connections of all sorts and read extensively. At the same time he was studying both French and German as a means of acquainting himself with foreign researches in natural history. Ultimately he also acquired at least a working knowledge of Italian, Spanish, and Danish. Drawing, mathematics, mineralogy, iron metallurgy, and chemistry he pursued with enthusiasm.

In the fall of 1846 BAIRD entered the faculty of Dickinson College as professor of natural history, having shortly before married Mary Helen CHURCHILL (1821-91), a well-educated, highly intelligent young woman, daughter of Col. Sylvester CHURCHILL, inspector-general during the Mexican War. The union was most happy. Mrs. BAIRD'S charm and devotion to her husband's welfare made his home continuously a center of delightful hospitality. Unfortunately she suffered much from ill health, but so far as possible she forwarded his activities, and was of especial help in his literary work. Their daughter, Lucy Hunter BAIRD, shared her father's interests to a marked degree, even in childhood, and cared tenderly for her mother's declining years.

In 1850 BAIRD went to the Smithsonian Institution at Washington as assistant secretary to the venerable head, Joseph HENRY, the physicist, upon whose death, in 1878, he was unanimously elected to the secretaryship. Among his original duties as

"Keeper of the Cabinet" was "to take charge of the making of collections for the Smithsonian Museum and to request of officers of the Army and Navy . . . and of other persons such assistance as might be necessary for the accomplishment of the intended objective."

The third stage of BAIRD'S career dates from the organization in 1871 of the United States Commission of fish and Fisheries. In addition to already heavy duties, he was now asked by President GRANT to assume the headship of the new Commission. For this position he was the logical selection, having actively interested himself in the study and collection of fishes for many years previous to this date.

In person, BAIRD was slightly over six feet in height and of robust build. Keen, kindly, clear-grey eyes looked out from under a fine forehead. In later years he always wore a beard. His general appearance carried the impression of a self-reliant man of affairs. It would seem that he attended church with some regularity, though with a considerable degree of denominational tolerance. He had only one "vice"—that of over-work. Indefatigable labors from youth up resulted in dangerously recurring attacks of heart-trouble from which he died on Aug. 19, 1887, at Wood's Hole, whither he had gone to await the end. Shortly before his death, he asked to be wheeled all around the Commission station and through the laboratory for a final contact with the work of his hands. He is buried at Oak Hill Cemetery, Washington, but at Wood's Hole a granite boulder bears a bronze tablet placed there in his memory in 1902 by the American Fisheries Society.

It has been wisely observed that no man was more typical of our nation at its best than Spencer Fullerton BAIRD. In the front rank of American naturalists, one of the ablest teachers of natural history, a great administrator of great affairs, with personal character above reproach, he lived in the open, and spent himself in the service of humanity.

Letter from William Baird

Transcribed from a copy of the original letter housed at the National Archives:

Richmond, August 20, 1862

To His Excellency
Jefferson Davis
President, C. S. A.

Sir

The peculiarity of my situation - which I will state as briefly as possible - impels me to take the liberty of addressing you.

I am one of the prisoners recently returned from Ft. Warren, where I was confined for about six months. Upon my arrival in Richmond after drawing the pay which had accrued to me in my absence and to which I looked for the relief of my family, who had suffered much during my long confinement, I was robbed in my hotel of every dollar I possessed - and since as I am also thrown out of service due to the recent changes in the army, I am without any means of repairing my loss. Being a citizen of Maryland, at an early period of the war, I came out and joined the army, and on this account my property on the banks of the Potomac was destroyed by the enemy and my house burned with all it contained and my wife and little children driven from a quiet house to follow up uncertain fortunes in the army. After my capture and the occupation of the Valley by the enemy, my family was sent back to Maryland., but instead of meeting there with sympathy and assistance in their distress, they found themselves surrounded by enemies though in the midst of kindred and aliens and strangers in the state of their nativity. I have a brother, a Brig. General [Absalom BAIRD] in the regular service of the U. S. and other influential relatives in the United States [brothers were attorneys in PA]; but all are so incensed at me for having embraced the cause of the South that my family can look for _____ or protection from them - nor do I desire that they should receive anything at their hands. My wife is a daughter of Mr. NELSON, late of Baltimore, formerly Attorney General of the United States and a life long democrat, who if he were living, I am satisfied would be a warm supporter of Southern rights as all his children are. I state these prominent facts - briefly, that I may not trespass upon your valuable time - in the hope that you may take into consideration the peculiar hardship of my case and that you may be able to put me into some civil position under the government by which I may be able to maintain those dependent upon me. If I have been too bold in thus addressing you, I hope you will pardon me.

Very Respectfully,

William BAIRD, Late Captain and Asst. Adjt. Gen., Richmond, VA

Wm BAIRD late Capt and A.A.G. CSA

Misc.

Recently returned from Ft. Warren. On account of the peculiar hardship of his case, asks for some civil position under the government by which he can maintain his family. Can you suggest any relief. J.D.

The formation of Maryland companies now going on and the possible formation of more offers a place for this gentlemen. There is more now vacant. GWR

✦✦✦✦PIONEER FAMILIES✦✦✦✦

THOMAS AND MARTHA BEARD - BAIRD, Pioneers on the Scrubgrass 1796; Compiled in 1958 by Jesse H. Baird, 25 Deer Hallow road, San Anselmo, California with the help of "The Cousins." Printed by: GABEL'S LITHO, Corte Madera, California.

THE PIONEERS:

Thomas BEARD (BAIRD) (1777-1863) - - m. 1799 (?) - - Martha McKEE (1777-1854). It was in 1796, during the second administration of President George WASHINGTON. A little group of surveyors had come from over the mountains to the hills west of the Allegheny River to block out four-hundred acre tracts of the primeval forest, preparatory for an on-coming westward movement of settlers. The Cornplanter Indians, after long bargaining, and being awed by "Mad Anthony Wayne's" victory at Fallen Timbers, Ohio, in 1794, had ceded their lands to the white men and the Government was selling and giving it away (much of western Pennsylvania) to the veterans of the Revolutionary War and to others who qualified.

The survey was not a happy sight to the eyes of the red men who watched from hidden forest nooks. They knew it meant the coming of a white scourge which would take their hunting grounds from them forever. To us whose names will be written in this book it is of more than passing interest that we are indebted to old Chief CORNPLANTER for suppressing a plot of the angry young braves who were planning to take the scalps of these surveyors. Chief CORNPLANTER secretly admired the white men and was trying to make "corn planters" of his people rather than warriors. He was wise enough to recognize that the settlement of the whites and the turning of the land to agriculture was inevitable. He was trying to make the most of it.

Our interest in this group of surveyors centers in two young men who were destined to assume a peculiar relationship to us. They were Thomas BEARD (BAIRD), our ancestor, and Thomas McKEE who was predestined to provide our ancestress, his sister Martha.

At some point early in these times of beginning, Thomas McKEE'S sister Martha joined him, having followed west by the same forest trail, across the mountains from the old home in Franklin County, Pennsylvania. A frontier courtship ensued (or did they know each other back home?) And Thomas BEARD and Martha McKEE became husband and wife, about 1799. They built their little log cabin by a crystal spring which flowed out of the hillside, cold and abundant, near the northeast corner of their acres. From their spring house it still meanders down through forest and field to Big Scrubgrass "Crick" about half a mile away. We must use our imaginations to reconstruct the log rolling and merry making which doubtless took place when the scattered neighbors gathered to see the young couple married and to roll the logs, build the cabin and "set them up." We wish we knew what wilderness circuit-riding "parson" tied the knot.

✦PIONEER FAMILIES (CON'T):

There must have been one, for those were devout people. Beneath the coarse homespun and deerskin garments of the people who gathered that day in the forest there beat hearts which carried all of the convictions, the culture and the religious and political inheritance of Christian Europe. "Rocky Spring, " "Old Stone, " "Harmony" and other churches would soon spring up in the forest to assume the task of similar places of worship left behind on the pioneer trail.

"They came from Franklin County" was all we, their descendants, knew about these pioneers for about a century and a half. Finally, in 1950, the writer of this article made a trip to Chambersburg, the county seat of Franklin, in Pennsylvania's Cumberland Valley. After a couple of days spent in court house, the library, and in private conversations, the quest led out four miles east of Chambersburg to the churchyard of old Rocky Spring Church, on Conococheague Creek. There, in a specially fenced plot, within the general burial grounds, there were many graves of BEARDS, BAIRDS, and BARDS. Their first names were our names - - John, Hugh, William, Robert, James, Mary, Martha, Elizabeth, Agnes, Sarah, Matilda, Susan, etc. The dates ranged from about 1735 to the early 1800's. And it was at least of interest that the name of the church was "Rocky Spring," for that is the name which the Scrubgrass pioneers gave to the forest "church" beneath the trees which they constructed near "Pone Hill," about four miles from the homestead of Thomas and Martha BEARD.

I am convinced that those graves of the Rocky Spring churchyard in Franklin County hold the ashes of our kinfolk. They and their neighbors were "Scotch Irish" people, scions of the hardy Scotch stock which once guarded the borders of old Scotland.

It was these Scotch-Irish pioneers who furnished over half of the soldiers for the Armies of the Revolution. In his darkest days George WASHINGTON said, "If I am defeated on the Delaware I will plant the banner of the Revolution on the heights of the Appalachians and gather about me such an army of the Scotch-Irish frontiersmen as will sweep every Britisher from the continent." We were there. There were McKEES at Valley Forge. There were BAIRDS, BEARDS and their relatives throughout the armies.

We peace came, it was "Westward, ho!" again. The westward moving frontier had been stopped prior to the Revolution by a forbidding barrier, the high backbone of the Appalachian mountain range which rises just west of Chambersburg. To cross that barrier would be to face into the vast leafy wilderness which stretched westward to nobody-knew-where. It would be to leave the friendly streams which flow eastward with their easy transportation back to the civilization of the seaboard and on across the ocean to the old homeland in Europe. It would be to follow streams which flow westward, deeper and deeper into the forest gloom. It would mean being on one's own in a howling wilderness. Nevertheless, when the war ended the Scotch-Irish did go over that hill. Selling their good limestone farms to their neighbors, the "Pennsylvania Dutch," and dubbing themselves "Men of the Western Waters," they responded again to the call of the frontier, the call which was in their blood. These were the people we have met in Western Pennsylvania, the pioneers of 1796 - - our people.

✦PIONEER FAMILIES (CON'T):

Through a Kinsman, Raymond McKEE of La Puente, California, we think we have been able to reconstruct the background of Thomas and Martha McKEE. Alexander McKEE and his four sons fought with the Protestants in the Battle of the Boyne in North Ireland in 1690. In 1735 Alexander and his son Thomas crossed the ocean to America and landed in Philadelphia. We have the port record of their entry. They went inland and established a fur trading station on the Susquehanna River, which became known as "Fort McKee." When the father passed away Thomas McKEE carried on and became a frontier personality to be reckoned with. He was trader, Indian Agent, and an officer in the British army. As his family grew up, one son, Alexander McKEE, made his way farther into the wilderness and built a trading station at the forks of the three great rivers where Pittsburgh would later raise her smokestacks and skyscrapers. He, too, became an Indian Agent, a fur trader, and an officer in the British army. In fact, he became "Colonel Alexander McKEE of His Majesty King George's Forces in America." His oath of allegiance to the King held him to the British side through the Revolution. He lived out his last years on the St. Lawrence, repudiated by America but adored by the Canadians. McKees Rocks and McKeesport bear his name, being built upon his land. Father Thomas McKEE of the Susquehanna had also purchased land on Conodoguinet Creek in Franklin County, a few miles from the Conococheague' where the BEARDS (BAIRDS) lived. It is thought that James McKEE, brother of Colonel Alexander McKEE of McKeesport, took up residence on that Conodoguinet farm at an early date. If so, our Thomas and Martha McKEE were perhaps his children, for he is known to have had a son Thomas and a daughter Martha.

Thomas BEARD an Martha McKEE! Dressed in homespun or deerskin, mounted no doubt upon wiry little horses such as were used on those forest trails, perhaps leading other horses packed with all you owned of this world's goods, threading your way in turn through he awesome shades of the great unspoiled forests, following the blazes chopped on the tree trunks, alert to every noise or movement in the silent forest - - our ancestors of the long, long ago! We, your children salute you, unto the eighth generation, about 600 of us. We too have been pioneers on many frontiers, until after a century and a half the frontier has faded out into the highly organized totality of this giant continental nation, America.

Come follow this family as the set up their wilderness home in the next issue.

AMERICA'S SUCCESSFUL MEN OF AFFAIRS: An Encyclopedia of Contemporaneous Biography, Volume 1, by Oscar Eugene Ballin.

COL. ANDREW D. BAIRD, merchant, born in Kelso, Scotland, October 14, 1839, is the son of Andrew BAIRD, a stone mason. He acquired a public school education, and in 1853 came to America with the family, which settled in the city of Brooklyn. Andrew was first apprenticed to a blacksmith, but within a year afterward to the stone-cutting trade in the employment of Robinson GILL in Brooklyn. May 13, 1861, he enlisted in the 79th N. Y. Vol's, the Highlanders, as they were called, the regiment being composed of men of Scottish descent. He served entirely through the war, taking part in forty-five battles and being wounded three times, and commanded the regiment after May, 1864.

After the peace, he returned to his stone yards and quarries in 1867, becoming a partner in the firm of GILL & BAIRD, to whose affairs he has since devoted his attention. The yards on Wythe and Kent avenues are among the foremost in the United States. Colonel BAIRD is trustee or director of The Nassau Trust Co., The Kings County Trust Co., The Williamsbugh Savings Bank, The Manufacturers' National Bank and The Twenty-sixth Ward Bank, as well as of other corporations. Greatly interested in municipal affairs, he has served as alderman several times and twice as candidate for Mayor of Brooklyn on the Republican ticket.

In 1866 he married Miss Mary WARNER, of Brooklyn, and several years after her death, Miss Catherine LAMB, in 1882. He has several children. The Union League Club of Brooklyn claims him as a member.

NORTHEAST ARKANSAS BIOGRAPHIES & HISTORICAL MEMOIRS:

Jeremiah Pitt BAIRD, one of the early settlers and leading farmers of Union Township, residing one and one-half miles east of Williford postoffice, was born in Smith County, Tenn., October 10, 1824, the son of Jeremiah and Mary (PENNINGTON) BAIRD. His father, of Scotch descent, was born in Rowan County, N. C., about 1785, and died in Lawrence County, Ark., in 1857. He married in North Carolina, emigrated from that State to Kentucky in 1817, resided there for one year, when he moved to Smith County, Tenn., and from there to Lawrence County, Ark., in 1841. Mrs. BAIRD was born in Montgomery County, N. C., near 1791, and died in Lawrence County, Ark., abut 1851.

Our subject, the only child living of a family of nine, received most of his education after arriving at maturity, his parents being poor, and he being obliged to work instead of attending school. After coming to Arkansas he lived with his parents till their death. In 1859 he married Miss Susan A. MORE, who was born in Tennessee about 1830, and died October 08, 1884, in Lawrence County. In 1888 he married Isabelle (WASSEN) CRAWFORD, a widow. Mr. BAIRD enlisted in 1863, in the Union Army, in Company C, First Missouri Cavalry, participating in the battle of Jenkins' Ferry, and was discharged in 1865. He has resided on Spring River since 1841, and has about 200 acres of land, eighty-five under cultivation. He has held the office of justice of the peace several terms in Lawrence County, and was one of the assistants of the county court, when it consisted of the judge and two justices. He is a Republican, voting first for Zachary TAYLOR. He and his wife are members of the Christian Church, as was his first wife. Mr. BAIRD is an influential citizen, well-to-do and highly respected.

WESTERN ARKANSAS BIOGRAPHIES AND HISTORICAL MEMOIRS:

William A. BAIRD is one of the self-made and influential men of Dover, Ark. He was born in Cherokee County, Ala., December 02, 1863, and in 1869 moved with his father to Arkansas, his early education being completed in the high school of Russellville, under the instruction of Prof. J. H. SHINN, now State superintendent of public instruction. His father, William BAIRD, was a farmer of Cherokee County, Ala, but was born in East Tennessee. William A. was reared on his father's farm, and at the age of nineteen, having obtained a sufficient education, he began teaching in the common schools, and carried on this calling in connection with farming for two years, when he was elected to the honorable and trustworthy position of county treasurer, a position he filled with marked ability for two years. He was then chosen one of the county examiners of schools, but at the expiration of two years he embarked in the drug business, at Dover, which he has successfully continued up to the present day. Starting on a small capital, he has steadily increased his business, until now his annual sales amount to $6,000, and he has acquired the reputation and title in his town of being a "hustler." Outside of his business, he is the owner of considerable property, in the north part of town, besides other property, and, as he has, at all times been strictly honorable and endeavors to please his patrons, his success is fully merited.

On January 14, 1886, he was united in the bonds of matrimony to Miss Maggie WEST, a daughter of D. P. And Katie WEST, of Dover. To Mr. and Mrs. BAIRD two children have been born: Porter L., b. 19 Oct. 1886, and George H., b. 12 Dec. 1888. Mr. BAIRD is a member of the Christian Church, and his wife is connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church South. He is a member of the Union Labor party, and has always shown himself to be public spirited and liberal in the support of worthy enterprises.
